TREASURE HUNTING IN THE AMANA COLONIES

Shopping in the Amana Colonies is unlike any other shopping experience you might have.

Here there are seven villages to see, each with its own rich history and each with its own story to tell. Shops and galleries in the Amana Colonies offer everything from locally-made folk arts to luxury gift items. The appeal of a shopping excursion in the Amana Colonies is that while you explore the villages you can see work by top regional artists, feel the cozy, comfort of an Amana wool blanket, savor the taste of hickory-smoked Amana sausage, try on the latest sportswear, sample palate-pleasing local wines, find rare country primitives, touch delicate European lace, learn how handcrafted furniture is made ... and so much more. Shopping in the Amana Colonies is a sensory experience with endless possibilities.

Antiques.

When it comes to antiques, the Amana Colonies are one of the Midwest's best-kept secrets. There are over a dozen antique shops in the Amana Colonies, including single-owner shops and large antique malls with multiple vendors stocking stalls. Additionally, some galleries and gift shops offer antiques and retro-collectibles.

Longtime Amana antiques dealer, Mary Anne Erenberger described the Colonies' antique scene this way, "The authenticity of the Amana Colonies setting, the old homes, the gardens, provides such a unique shopping experience. For people who enjoy antiques, they just love it ... And we have a real diversity of shops here. There are really high quality antiques to be found in the Colonies."

Locally Crafted Goods.

The Amana Colonies have a 151-year history of craftsmanship. During its communal era, village furniture shops, tinsmiths, blacksmiths, basket and carpet weavers, candle makers and quilters produced useful things for everyday life.

Today is no different. Amana Colonies crafters still make useful things for everyday life, along with a beautiful array of contemporary arts and crafts. There is nothing commonplace about Amana-made crafts. Many shops offer locally-made handcrafted items including furniture, clocks, tinware, knives, copper and brass art, ironwork, baskets, brooms, woodcrafts, needlework, rugs, soaps, pottery, jewelry, candles and quilts.

You'll find handmade Amana Colonies crafts surprisingly affordable. And in the seven villages, you might meet the very person who created the piece you have selected.

Luxury is in the Details.

Shopping the Amana Colonies means discovering a variety of shops offering the best in boutique sportswear, outerwear, fashion accessories, semi-precious gemstone and costume jewelry, imported porcelain, trendy collectibles, home and garden accessories, holiday ornaments and seasonal decor, glassware, toys, art and books. And it means discovering good, old-fashioned customer service.

You can spend days browsing through the 60-some specialty shops throughout the seven villages. Helping you find that rare collectible, choosing the perfect holiday ornament, picking a puzzle to please your six-year-old, or finding just the right gift for someone special – in the Amana Colonies that is our specialty.
